In the storm's wake

Working overtime.
City, hydro, WFPS all kept busy after the nasty weather

SHANE GIBSON

While people in Winnipeg and across the province began cleaning up after Sunday's severe thunderstorms, a couple from St. Laurent is thankful to be alive.

Destiny Young and Donovan Boudreau were in their mobile home when winds reaching 150 km/h flipped it on its roof and tore the floor off, leaving it "obliterated" according to RM of St. Laurent Reeve Earl Zotter.

"They were in it when it hit, they were trapped, and when the next gust hit it lifted up the wall and they were able to get out," Zotter told Metro by phone. "It looks ugly this morning ... that they were able to get out, and relatively unscathed, is a miracle."

Zotter called Twin Beaches the storm's "epicentre", and said homes and cabins in the area — many already devastated by last year's flooding — were again left battered by the storm.

"It's kind of like hitting someone when they're down," he said of the new destruction.

In Winnipeg, the city reported receiving 500 calls regarding downed trees, and branch and brush pick-up by 3 p.m. on Monday.

Three city crews began working through the night, and the city's full complement of workers were on duty until midnight Monday cleaning up. Crews are expected to keep the same schedule over the next few days.

downed trees and dangling power lines blocked the only roadway in and out of the neighbourhood.

"What if an ambulance needs to get in here?" asked Julius Waedt, 86, a 45-year-resident of Kingston Crescent, while hydro workers and city crews removed the trees and worked to restore power. "I don't know what they're doing, I think they're just overwhelmed by all of this."

Manitoba Hydro said they'd received around 1,300 calls for service in Winnipeg alone.

Power was expected to be back to most of Winnipeg by Monday evening.

New day, new leader for Tories

Say hello. Brian Pallister makes first appearance as leader of the Progressive Conservative Party of Manitoba

winnipeg@metronews.ca

The new leader of the Progressive Conservative Party of Manitoba made his first media appearance Monday morning.

Brian Pallister said he is optimistic about the future of the party, the province, and the people of Manitoba.

"Manitoba is described by too many people as a have-not province," said Pallister. "Manitoba is a have province, with a have-not government."

"And what it needs is ambition, and aspiration. Not just on the part of government, surely, but all of us."

The former MP for the Portage-Lisgar riding said the first steps he will take as leader include building the organization's structure and fundamentals, and rebuilding the party's membership.

"My commitment is to build this party, and to build it we need help — we need a big work crew," he said. "I want to see more people getting involved in politics and discussions about public policy issues that matter."

He said he will reveal his plan for his first 100 days as leader within the week, after consulting with his caucus.

"We — as a political organization, as individuals, and collectively as a team — will be making the best possible case that we deserve the right and the honour to govern this province in the next provincial election," he said.

Brian Pallister was untested after submitting his leadership papers in spring, and was named leader of the Progressive Conservative party on Sunday. He currently does not hold a seat, but is expected to run in the Fort Whyte riding in a by-election.

Brian Pallister, the newly acclaimed leader of the Progressive Conservative Party of Manitoba, speaks to media at the Legislature Building in Winnipeg on Monday.

It may have been relocated nine times over 25 years, but The Salvation Army is only looking to the future with the unveiling of its Barbara Mitchell Family Resource Centre on Morrow Avenue in St. Vital.

"This new facility today with its vast capacity will offer a multifaceted response to the needs of families and individuals," said Commissioner Brian Peddle, territorial commander of The Salvation Army Canada and Bermuda Territory, on Monday.

The first facility at 51 Morrow Ave., known as the Multicultural Family Centre, opened in 1987 and three years later it moved to another location.

Dignitaries, members of Barbara Mitchell's family and The Salvation Army reps cut the tri-coloured ribbon at the new centre on Monday. BERNICE PONTANILLA/METRO

Centre returned to Morrow but the building was in serious disrepair. In 2009, the decision was made to build a larger and more energy-efficient building that could meet the demands of the community.

The new facility has a gymnasium, oversized living room, community kitchen, classrooms, daycare with 47 spaces (15 infants and 32 preschool) and a computer lab.

The centre is named in the memory of Barbara Mitchell, the daughter of Reta and Garfield Weston, owners of Loblaw's. Mitchell died in 2001.

Emma Mitchell said her family spent two and a half years looking at proposals from across the country.

"The most exciting thing for us is to see the families in here with children," added Mitchell. "My mother loved children, she had six of us!"

Mary Cyr said she likes the programs the centre offers for her kids, who are 12 and seven years old. "They have a basketball program for my older son and we come (with her seven-year-old) for the mom and tots program when we can," she said.

Youth. Two charged and gun seized

A man and a male youth have been arrested and face a number of charges after two suspects threatened to shoot a teenage girl in the North End last week.

Police say a group of six males — one carrying two guns — confronted a 16-year-old girl around 4:30 a.m. last Thursday near the corner of Flora Avenue and Andrews Street.

An 18-year-old suspect passed one of the guns to a 17-year-old male youth and told him to shoot the victim. The youth pointed the loaded gun at the young woman, threatening her and her home. She walked away without being hurt and called police.

Later that afternoon, the 17-year-old youth was arrested in the 100 block of Powers Street, and the 18-year-old male was arrested on Saturday night near Selkirk Avenue and Salter Street.

Police recovered a loaded handgun after raiding a house in the 100 block of Juno Street. METRO

Dark Knight shooting suspect slapped with 24 murder raps

Mental state of mind.

Experts say it's not a question of guilt, but whether or not James Holmes is insane

Prosecutors on Monday charged a former neuroscience graduate student with 24 counts of murder and 116 counts of attempted murder in the Colorado theatre rampage that once again opened a national debate over guns. Legal analysts expect the case to be dominated by arguments over his sanity.

James Holmes appeared just as dazed as he did in his first court appearance a week ago, but at one point he exchanged a few words with one of his attorneys. Some victims and family members again watched him in the packed courtroom, and before the hearing some clasped their hands and bowed their heads as if in prayer.

The July 20 attack at a midnight showing of the new Batman movie left 12 people dead and 58 others injured.

Holmes also faces one count of possession of explosives. After his arrest outside the theatre, police said they found his apartment was booby trapped.

On Friday, court papers revealed that Holmes was seeing a psychiatrist at the university. But they did not say how long he was seeing Dr. Lynne Fenton and if it was for a mental illness. An online résumé listed schizophrenia as one of her research interests.

Under Colorado law, defendants are not legally liable for their acts if their minds are so "diseased" that they cannot distinguish between right and wrong.

Distracted walking problem growing step by step

In this July 10 photo, pedestrians cross K Street in downtown Washington. Experts say texting while walking is becoming a major problem.

PABLO MARTINEZ MONSIVAIS/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS FILE

On city streets, in suburban parking lots and in shopping centres, there is usually someone strolling while talking on a phone, texting with his head down, listening to music, or playing a video game. The problem isn't as widely discussed as distracted driving, but safety experts say the danger is real.

Reports of injuries to distracted walkers treated at hospital emergency rooms have more than quadrupled in the past seven years and are almost certainly underreported. There has been a spike in pedestrians killed and injured in traffic accidents, but there is no reliable data on how many were distracted by electronics.

"We are where we were with cellphone use in cars 10 years or so ago. We knew it was a problem, but we didn't have the data," said Jonathan Atkins, deputy executive director of the Governors Highway Safety Association, which represents U.S. highway safety offices.

State and local officials are struggling to figure out how to respond, and in some cases asking how far government should go in trying to protect people from themselves.

In Delaware, highway safety officials opted for a public education campaign, placing decals on crosswalks and sidewalks at busy intersections.

Philadelphia officials are drafting a safety campaign that will be aimed in part at pedestrians who are looking at their devices instead of where they're going. As an April Fool's Day joke with a serious message, city officials also taped off an "e-lane" for distracted pedestrians on a sidewalk outside downtown office buildings.

Police said a former KT employee and six others were also charged for their roles in the scheme.

Apple, Samsung spar over patents

Court case. Jury of 10 will be selected this week before opening statements begin in a trial expected to last more than a month

With billions of dollars and control of the U.S. smartphone and computer tablets markets at stake, jury selection began Monday in a closely watched trial between two of the world's leading tech companies over patents.

Apple filed a lawsuit against Samsung Electronics last year alleging the world's largest technology company's smartphones and computer tablets are illegal knockoffs of its popular iPhone and iPad products.

Cupertino-based Apple is demanding $2.5 billion US in damages, an award that would dwarf the largest patent-related verdict to date.

Samsung countered that Apple is doing the stealing

Smartphone wars

- The pace of iPhone sales has slowed, Apple revealed last week. Part of the problem is that the competition has thinner phones with big screens.

- Samsung, the number-one maker of smartphones, touts its newest flagship phone, the Galaxy S III, sleek and wafer-thin.

and that some of the technology at issue — such as the rounded rectangular designs of smartphones and tablets — have been industry standards for years.

A jury of 10 people will be picked from a pool of dozens, and opening statements could start late Monday or early Tuesday in a trial expected to last more than a month.

The case is just the latest skirmish between the two companies over product designs. A similar trial began last week, and the two companies have been fighting in courts in the United Kingdom and Germany.

Industry-wide, some 50 lawsuits have been filed by myriad telecommunications companies jockeying for position in the burgeoning $219-billion market for smartphones and computer tablets.

U.S. District Judge Lucy Koh in San Jose last month ordered Samsung to pull its Galaxy 10.1 computer tablet from the U.S. market pending the outcome of the upcoming trial, though the judge barred Apple attorneys from telling the jurors about the ban.

Legal observers say it's rare that a patent battle with so much at stake doesn't settle short of a trial.

Court-ordered mediation sessions attended by Apple's chief executive Tim Cook and high-ranking Samsung officials failed to resolve the legal squabble, leading to a highly technical trial of mostly expert witnesses opining on patent laws and technology. Cook is not on the witness list and is not expected to testify.

Apple lawyers argue there is almost no difference between Samsung's products and Apple's and that the South Korean company's internal documents show it copied Apple's iconic designs and its interface.

Economy. Ottawa should try new round of stimulus spending: CIBC

With speculation rising of a second recession, the CIBC says Ottawa should consider a new round of stimulus spending to backstop the economy.

CIBC chief economist Avery Shenfeld says with interest rates at record low levels, borrowing is so cheap that the government may actually come off financially better off by going deeper into debt.

That's because real 30-year rates are now below the economy's long-term expected growth rate, so the cost of additional debt will steadily shrink as a portion of gross domestic product with time.

The CIBC doubts the Bank of Canada has much ammunition left to stimulate the economy, noting that with rates already low, trying to tempt Canadians to borrow even more to prop up the housing market may be counter-productive.

Shenfeld cautions he is not predicting a second recession sion and that his suggestions are a kind of contingency plan should global conditions continue to deteriorate.

So far, Canada has managed to skirt the troubles and Tuesday's new GDP report for May is expected to show a relatively healthy gain of about 0.3 per cent from April.

But most analysts are becoming more concerned about the global recovery, and say Canada would not be able to stay above the fray if the European crisis worsens.

Black sees potential in newspapers

Conrad Black says he sees investment potential in Canadian newspapers, sparking speculation that the former media baron wants to re-enter the media industry.

"There is a great premium to be placed on the editorial function and on the goodwill of a famous trademark like a respected newspaper," Black told the Huffington Post Canada during an editorial board meeting.

"Any good title that's grossly underpriced could be interesting."

Black, 67, recently returned to Canada on a temporary resident permit after serving 37 months in a Florida prison for fraud and obstruction of justice while he was head of media giant Hollinger International, former owner of papers from Canada's National Post to Israel's Jerusalem Post.

Black said he isn't actually in the market to buy a newspaper right now. He evaded questions about how he would transform a newspaper in order to make it profitable in the new digital landscape.

"It's not that I don't have an answer, but I'm not going to answer because it might be an untimely and excessive disclosure, and compromise what I might actually do," he said.

It may be difficult for Black to re-enter the Canadian media industry, because it's not known yet whether he will be allowed to stay in the country after his temporary permit expires. The media mogul renounced his Canadian citizenship in 2001 to become a member of the British House of Lords.

Black, who doesn't have a Canadian work permit, has said he plans to keep writing for Canadian media outlets, including the Huffington Post Canada and the National Post, the newspaper he founded more than a decade ago.

WHY PUT PRIVATE PAIN IN THE PUBLIC EYE?

SHE SAYS...
Jessica Napier
metronews.ca/shesays

We all make mistakes in our 20s. Luckily, most of us don't have to live out those youthful bad decisions on the front page of People magazine. Kristen Stewart — of red carpet grimacing and Twilight fame — is not as fortunate as us regular folk.

Last week, the 22-year-old starlet was outed in a very public manner for cheating on her long-time boyfriend Robert Pattinson with married Snow White and the Huntsman director Rupert Sanders.

Sadly 'Robsten' — perhaps the most overreaching celebrity couple portmanteau of all time — is no more. But while TwiHard fan girls are mourning the end of an on-screen vampire romance turned true love, the rest of us are wondering, why on Earth we should care at all?

Oh that's right, because Stewart and her philandering partner released PUBLIC statements of apology, as if we are the ones being directly impacted by this made-in-Hollywood affair.

It seems confusing to me that stars in the spotlight — who usually demand privacy in times of great stress — would validate the role that these gossip magazines play in their personal relationships by issuing apologetic press releases. I think both Stewart and Sanders' statements have everything to do with creating publicity and very little to do with salvaging their respective relationships.

Unfortunately, overt performances of romance gone awry aren't confined to the world of celebrity couples.

I'll confess that I've been there. Following an Earth-shattering teenage breakup, I spent about a month adorning my MSN screen name with sensitive song lyrics by courtesy for my entire pre-Facebook social network to see.

And while these barefaced displays of pubescent melancholy might be forgivable from a 16-year-old, I still see the same sort of emotional exhibitionism from my peers a decade later.

I see it all the time, people baiting friends and followers with attention-seeking updates on their private-life dramas. Do you really find solace in smearing your broken heart all over your Facebook profile? Does tweeting about newly 'single and fabulous' status offer you real emotional validation? Is it really necessary to Instagram a photo of yourself with downcast eyes and a solemn pout with #Breakup attached?

What does it say about us as a society that we not only have a schadenfreude-esq obsession with celebrity couple breakdowns, but that we feel the need to imitate their penchant for over-sharing in our own online worlds?

We should probably leave the brazen theatrics to shameless reality stars and teenagers with raging hormonal levels. Remember, not every emotional meltdown warrants a press release, at least not in the 'real' world.

Le Havre

Director. Aki Kaurismäki

Stars. André Wilms, Blondin Miguel, Jean-Pierre Darroussin

Le Havre is an exceeding droll comedy from Finnish master Aki Kaurismäki, whose dark worldview is balanced by a deep empathy for his blue-collar characters. Charming in its retro manners, cares and colours — while at the same time contemporary in its grasp of immigration and poverty issues — the film is set in the French port city of the title, a place where goods and people are constantly shifting. André Wilms stars as wily old shoeshiner Marcel, who dodges cops and creditors as he cheerily dispenses polish and eccentric home-spun philosophy out of the main railway station. Marcel's bonhomie is put to the test by a big event: a group of African stowaways, illegal immigrants all, have been discovered inside a container on the Le Havre dock. One of them, a young pre-teen named Idrissa (Blondin Miguel), manages to evade police and port authorities, and he's now being sought. Will Marcel squeal or assist? As good as the cast is, it's the deceptively passive Miguel who anchors the film.

I'm Yours

Director. Leonard Farlinger

Stars. Rossif Sutherland, Karine Vanasse, Don McKellar

There aren't a whole lot of road romances where North Bay is the destination, and after this there aren't likely to be many more. A miscast and mismatched Rossif Sutherland and Karine Vanasse stretch credibility at every quirk-filled turn as they follow a bag of loot and chase family problems on the long trek from New York to Ontario's "Gateway to the North." Sutherland plays a Wall Streeter disillusioned upon turning 30. Vanasse plays the bar hook-up who becomes the reason for the road trip. The eye-rolling script is the main problem.

If it ain't broke don't fix it, says No.1 CBS

Television Critics Association press tour. Network head touts first-place success, talks new and returning shows

AMBER RAY

Metro World News in New York

As head of the top-rated broadcast network, Nina Tassler, President of CBS Entertainment, didn't have many announcements to make when addressing journalists at the Television Critics Association press tour in Beverly Hills, Calif., other than one clear message: The network is on top, and plans to stay there.

"We're No. 1 in viewers. We're No. 1 in upfront revenue. We're No. 1 in Emmy nominations," Tassler said. "Good performance, good business, and outstanding quality on the screen. I'm really proud of the environment we've created for launching and sustaining hit shows, from development, to scheduling, to marketing, to current programming," she added.

In a "not broke, not gonna fix it" move, the CBS slate this fall includes just four new series: Elementary, a modern take on Sherlock Holmes; Vegas, about the politics and crime that shaped the Strip in the 1960s; Made in Jersey, a crime procedural following a Jersey girl working her way up at a high-end Manhattan law firm; and the buddy comedy Partners.

Regarding the pickup of Elementary at a time when there are many other versions of Sherlock Holmes on the pop culture scene (the BBC series Sherlock and the Sherlock Holmes movie franchise included), Tassler said, "when you have an opportunity to build a show around one of the greatest detectives in all of literature, you're going to jump at that opportunity."

She called the BBC series, which airs on PBS in the States, "extraordinary," and is confident "there's plenty of room for another Holmes in our world."

When questioned about Vegas and the recent failure of other period dramas on broadcast networks (The Playboy Club, Pan Am) Tassler insisted her '60s-set series goes beyond a nostalgia factor. It is foremost about the fascinating character of real-life Sheriff Ralph Lamb, who fought to bring order to the mob-run casino scene, she said.

"The fact that it was set in the '60s certainly informed the show, but it's not about the '60s, per se," Tassler said. "It's about these two forces that were battling for the heart and soul of Las Vegas at a very key moment in the history of the city."

Most questions posed to the CBS exec, however, involved returning series.

Here's what she had to say: "Well, they had an incredible year last year. We've got a great relationship with (creators) Craig (Thomas) and Carter (Bays), and certainly they have a very strategic wrap-up to the show. They know we want the show to come back next year. We are having conversations right now about extending it. We want the show to come back next year."

On cancelling CSI: Miami ...

"Saying goodbye to a CSI this year was — it was a very big deal. That show has been extraordinarily successful for us. So it was a difficult decision. What we looked at — it was a jump ball. What we looked at was Friday night versus Sunday night. We looked at the flow on Friday night for New York versus Miami. So it was a very tough choice. But as I said, it was really a jump ball and just had to do with the schedule."

... And changes to CSI: New York:

"We've added Natalie Martinez to the cast. The show has, as I said, a lot more humour and a lot more New York, fun, event-type stories."

For Kristen Bell, teaming up again with fiancé Dax Shepard for their new movie, Hit and Run, was something of a no-brainer. “We realized we’re severely co-dependent,” Bell tells Us Weekly. “It’s not just like you’re caught in the house with your significant other for six weeks and you’re both doing different things and feel like you’re in each other’s way. Sophia Bush was spotted grabbing coffee with Topher Grace in West Hollywood last week, but the newly single actress wants to make it clear that the two are not dating, she tells Us Weekly. “Topher has been one of my dearest friends for six years,” says Bush, who’s starring in Partners, a new TV comedy this fall.

“We have coffee all the time and he is actually a great sounding board for me with sort of how to be prepared with all things sitcom.” Bush recently split from her boyfriend of six years — and One Tree Hill co-star — Austin Nichols. She’d previously been married to another of the show’s stars, Chad Michael Murray.

THE WORD

Colin Farrell has been behaving himself for years now, doing just enough films to stay relevant while plugging just enough charities to seem rich and enlightened.

But while we may forget his rehab-and-sex-tape days, Farrell is surprised his career survived them. “I had burned so many bridges in the film industry that I couldn’t get a f—king meeting,” the actor tells Men’s Health.

You can catch him this weekend in the remake of Total Recall, a role he was able to land thanks to his fairly healthy new lifestyle.

“I don’t put the same level of energy into healthy living as I did into unhealthy living, but I eat really well, drink loads of green tea and take a s—t load of vitamins,” he tells the magazine. “It’s so f—king boring. Life has mutated to take on this sweet simplicity that I am really f—king OK with.”

In the wake of Kristen Stewart’s apology for cheating on Robert Pattinson, the Twilight co-stars are reportedly not speaking to each other, according to People magazine. Sources say both parties have left the L.A. home they share and are living elsewhere separately. “I’m not sure they’ll be able to recover from this,”

a source tells the magazine, adding that Pattinson “is heartbroken and angry.” They’ll have to face each other soon enough, though, as they’re set to be co-presenters at MTV’s Video Music Awards on Sept. 6, just as promotional duties begin in earnest for the final Twilight film, out in November.

Taking the guesswork out of emergency room wait times

Technology. Hospitals across Canada are using tools to help patients make informed decisions about making the trip

life@metronews.ca

How long will I have to wait in the Emergency? The answer to that question may soon be at your fingertips.

One hospital in Ontario and several in Alberta now have websites that tell patients how long they'll wait for emergency care.

"Patients and families appreciate knowing in advance how long they'll have to wait to see a physician or nurse practitioner," says Don Shilton, president of St. Mary's General Hospital in Kitchener, the first Ontario hospital with the tool.

"This helps them plan their lives...whether to arrange child care or bring a book."

All hospitals across the country use a triage system to dictate which patients get seen first.

Those with a life-threatening illness or injury, such as a heart attack or major trauma from a car accident, will always get priority.

needs, such as tummy pain or an earache, will have to wait longer. The new tool tells you, with the click of a mouse, the average wait time for those with non-life-threatening problems.

"The time on the clock is updated every 20 minutes," says Shilton. "If people decide they don't want to wait, the tool also lists alternatives to the emergency department such as urgent care clinics."

He hopes other hospitals adopt the tool, so that patients can explore alternatives online.

The next step is developing a smart phone App that helps you find the closest emergency department, provide directions on how to get there and show how long you'll wait once you get there.

"I can see this being very helpful if you were in a different city or part of the province," says Shilton.

Hospitals in Edmonton and Calgary are using a similar tool, according to Health-ydebate.ca, an online health care magazine based at St. Michael's Hospital in Toronto.

The battles of the grill

Dialogue. Excerpt from Shut Up and Eat! takes humorous look at a conversation that many couples could have this summer

life@metronews.ca

One of the great things about barbecuing is that it is normally relatively easy to suck the man of the house into actually cooking. Something to do with an open flame and the inherent explosive danger proves irresistible to these gullible fellows.

Of course, the big downside is because they have spent a good 20 minutes searing a steak, they expect to get the credit for the entire meal, which, by the way, consists of salad, potatoes, fruit and dessert, all of which has taken you about two hours to complete.

Personally, I try to find additional things for my husband to do while in the backyard manning the grill — including garbage clean up, putting the hose away, backwashing the pool, installing some fencing.... Be creative and see how far it takes you.

Also, be prepared for the following conversation:

Him: OK, honey, so I'll take care of dinner tonight. I picked up some steaks.

Me: Great. So what are we having with them?

Him: Potatoes and corn.

Me: You have that?

Him: We always have potatoes and corn in the house. (Sadly, we do.)

Me: OK, whatever.

Him: Right then, I'm starting up the barbecue.

Me: Yeah, listen, I only need about an hour to get the other stuff ready. You might want to wait.

Him: (Gone outside.)

Me: *%&*ng idiot.

Him: I'm ready for those steaks now.

Me: Fabulous. Hope they need about 45 minutes on the barbecue because that's how long the rest of the dinner is going to take. Hey, who's setting the table?

Him: (Back outside again, stopping only to grab a beer out of the fridge.)

Me: *%&*ng idiot. Kids, get in here and set the table and help me husk the corn!

Him: OK, we're almost done.

Me: Stupendous. Just cut my finger with a knife while trying to peel the potatoes because your idiot son used the potato peeler to whittle a stick last week. Oh, yeah. The corn is still hard and we've only found four forks.

Him: (Gone. The sound of a beer cap twisting can be heard from the deck.)

Me: ^%$^#ng idiot. Ouch. Crap. Damn.

Him: And we're ready. Kids, dinner!

Me: What the hell are you doing? The potatoes are half raw, the water for the corn hasn't boiled yet and I'm still on hold with Telehealth to see about this red line that's travelling up my arm from the cut on my finger.

Him: Mmmmm. Now that's a steak. Your Dad knows how to cook, eh guys?

100% invested in the stock market? Spread some of that cash out

Alison's money rule.
Timing the stock exchange to perfection is probably as difficult as winning the lottery

YOUR MONEY
Alison Griffiths
money@metronews.ca

A couple of days ago I got the kind of email I hate the most. If it had been snail mail I would have seen tear drops on the paper.

It was from a distraught woman in her mid-40s who was taking a beating in the stock market. Her portfolio had been 100 per cent invested in stocks (through mutual funds) and she flip-flopped back and forth between the US and Canadian market — losing both ways.

Now she's pulled all her money out of the market, paid deferred sales charge fees on her mutual funds, and is sitting on the sidelines waiting for the right moment to get back in. Essentially she is doubling down on a bad bet and she's almost certain to lose again.

I'd have no quarrel if she can't stomach the turmoil of the stock market. But if so she should put her money in GICs or a savings account. She won't make much money but she won't lose any either.

The simple fact is that the average investor cannot time the market and very few professionals can manage the trick either.

So what can you do? It's called asset allocation.

The task is to divide your money among equities (stocks), bonds and cash. Historically the equities provide growth over time. Bonds provide ballast because they churn out interest when the stock market goes down. Cash is for emergencies and it also will provide

In numbers

9 per cent

The average annual return of investment grade corporate bonds over 20 years with interest re-invested.

some interest income.

A sample asset allocation might be 50 per cent equities, 40 per cent bonds and 10 per cent cash. The equities could be divided 25 per cent U.S. and 75 per cent Canada. Pick an allocation that works for you, your risk tolerance and your situation.

The next step is critical. Use new contributions or dividend and interest income to maintain your allocation. This is called rebalancing and it's the key to lowering risk and increasing return.

Unless you have an accurate crystal ball, correctly timing the stock market is less likely than winning the lottery.

How to save $120K by brown-bagging it

FUN AND FRUGAL
Leslie Scorgie
money@metronews.ca

Ever wonder what buying your lunch each workday actually costs you over the course of your working career?

According to VISA Canada's July 2012 lunch survey, the average Canadian will spend just less than $9 on their lunch when eating out. When $9 per workday is compounded at the rate of inflation, 3.5 per cent, for 40 years, it adds up to a whopping $180,000!

A brown bag alternative, costs up to $3 per day or $60,000 throughout a person's working career when the same calculation is applied. Not only is a brown bag lunch frugal, it's often healthier than purchasing fast foods or lunches that contain unhealthy ingredients.

Simply making lunch at home rather than buying it could save the average Canadian nearly $120,000.

Imagine what you could do with that kind of dough! Pay off your mortgage, save for your retirement, sail around the world for three years or send your children to top Canadian universities.

If you're concerned about being a social outcast at work because you're brown bagging it, park that thought.

Encourage your colleagues to pack their lunches by telling them how much they can save too.

Turn it into a game — track each other's progress by throwing the 'would be' lunch money into personalized savings jars that can be deposited into an investment plan once per week. Whoever saves the most wins a free picnic pot luck lunch, hosted by the colleagues that lost the game.

Don't bail on the brown bag alternative even if you're not Chef Gordon Ramsay. Take 5 minutes on Sunday night to plan out your lunches and then head to your local grocery store. Purchase only what you'll need for the week and ensure you've bought a variety of foods from all the food groups — fruits, veggies, breads, meats, and dairy. Stick with healthy foods that will give you plenty of energy for your busy workday.

Save big bucks by using coupons at the grocery store, buying locally grown foods and produce that is in season. If you're not great at making salads or sandwiches, cook a bit extra at dinner and take leftovers for lunch.

Rather than unnecessarily ingesting $120,000, put it towards something you're dreaming about — a financial goal that builds your bottom line.

Only 35 per cent of Germans even have a credit card. ISTOCK IMAGES

Germany's cash culture shows aversion to debt

Head to the checkout at an Ikea store in Stockholm to pay for your new leather corner sofa and with the swipe of a Visa card it's yours. Don't try that in Berlin — that'll be 1,699 euros ($2,107 Cdn) up front, please.

It's that financial culture — a deep-seated aversion to debt and an emphasis on responsibility — that makes Chancellor Angela Merkel's hardline approach to solving the European financial crisis so popular in Germany. The attitude shows up in all walks of life, from the daily trip to the store to buying a house.

The economy is so reliant on cash for transactions small and big, a way to ensure you don't spend more than you have, that Germany pushed hard for the 500-euro note to replace its popular 1,000-mark bill when it joined the common currency.

It's one of the largest denomination notes being produced anywhere today, worth around $620, and is even known in neighbouring France as "the German note." While even discount supermarkets in Germany happily take the big euro bill, very few shops in France will accept it.

Even though Germany is Europe's largest economy and one of its richest per head, it is last in home ownership with just over 40 per cent. That compares to some 80 per cent in troubled European Union countries like Greece, Italy and Spain, and around 70 per cent in Britain and the United States, where owning your own home is part of the "American Dream."

Germans tend to be instinctively averse to taking out a mortgage. And lenders often demand a 20 per cent down payment on a house or substantial collateral. So a culture has sprung up of just renting and holding on to cash.

The German aversion to debt also translates to credit card use — or non-use. Only 36 per cent of Germans over the age of 15 even possess a card, compared with 62 per cent in the U.S., according to World Bank figures. And even when Germans do have a card, the limit is usually tied to a customer's bank balance and the bill is automatically paid off from the customer's account.

EDUCATION BOOM

CHANGING OF THE GUARD AS BABY BOOMERS RETIRE

Adult education is booming — thanks to the baby boomers.

Bob Cram, executive director of the Centre for Continuing and Distance Education at the University of Saskatchewan, says older workers exiting the workforce have driven up demand for business courses to train their replacements.

Demand this fall will be high for courses in business, communications skills, writing skills and leadership development, supervisory dealing with difficult people. "All of those courses help you develop skills you can use in your job," he says.

Many adult learners take skills non-credit courses once a week in 13-week evening classes. He says leadership development and project management are the most popular. Another popular section is graduate programs like an MBA for a businesswoman advancing her career, or a master's in education for a teacher who wants to become a principal. Public administration and public health degrees are also in demand.

Cram attributes it to a changing of the guard as boomers retire. Those retired boomers also created the second surge in adult education. "Now they want to take courses that are just for fun. For the love of learning," he says.

They don't care about getting a degree, but just want a social outing in an educational setting. Many cities have non-profit organizations like the 400-member Saskatoon Seniors Continuing Learning Inc. These groups liaise with their members and their local universities to pick classes on topics like Irish literature, the origins of the First World War, or Prairie geology.

Cram notes you can audit a course, which means you don't get a credit, but it reduces the cost by half. Seniors can sometimes learn for free. "Typically, it's after the normal registration period has closed. If there's space in the class they can register for free," he says.

The trend is moving away from that, but it's worth checking with your registrar. Courses organized specifically by seniors groups are often only about $50 anyway.

Cram notes that many of the professional development courses are being taken online. The University of Saskatchewan saw online enrolment jump 35 per cent in each of the last two years.

them focus on getting you a job.

"We pay attention to both employers' and students' needs," says Erin Stewart, dean of PACE. "Currently, there is a demand for individuals with project management skills, so we developed a training program to meet that. This is just one example."

People choose PACE for many different reasons. Some have full-time jobs, meaning they need to study part time. Others are out of work, and need to train for a new career quickly. Others still have employers who wish them to upgrade their skills.

And then there are those who just want to make a big change.

"I had a student in one of my classes who had retired from the military," remembers Stewart.

"This soldier had always wanted to work with children and so he enrolled in our educational assistant program. He found a job immediately after graduation and was able to fulfil his dream."

PACE programs cover a range of disciplines. Most programs also include a supervised job placement or internship. These internships are popular with employers, many of whom hire the students who work for them as soon as the placement is done.

Return of Bowman could boost Bombers

CFL. Third-year linebacker might be back in lineup, while Douglas has been ruled out for season

First the good news from the overflowing hospital tent of the Winnipeg Blue Bombers.

Linebacker Marcellus Bowman could be back in the lineup for the first time this season when Winnipeg meets the Montreal Alouettes this Friday.

That's when the Bombers (1-4) will try for just their second win of 2012 when they host the Alouettes (2-3).

Bowman was practising again Monday after recovering from a hamstring injury.

"I feel good," he said after a solid workout, including a hit

"We don't want this to be a recurring thing. We'll do our due diligence to make sure that's healthy."

Blue Bombers coach Paul LaPolice on quarterback Buck Pierce's injured foot just to make sure he was game ready.

"I feel fresh out here. I tested it pretty good today ... No pain or anything like that so I'm ready to go."

Coach Paul LaPolice was a little more cautious, although he would very much like to have Bowman, now in his third season, back on the field.

"The guy's got more experience, he's a talented player," said the coach.

"We've just got to get the rust out of him but it will be good to have him flying around if he's ready."

which means he won't return in 2012.

"He had a flare-up on his ankle and he's got a piece that keeps moving back and forth and it's going to have to be surgically repaired so he will be done for the year."

The plan at the start of the season had been to have Douglas and Glenn January anchor the o-line at left and right tackle to give some young Canadian talent time to mature.

That hasn't worked out so well. Last year's draft pick Paul Swiston has been seeing a lot of action on the line but this year's pick, Tyson Pencer, is already on the nine-game injured list, where Douglas was placed Monday.

If Bowman comes back that still leaves a dozen Bombers on either the regular or nine-game injured list. THE CANADIAN PRESS

MLB. Adam Lind goes on DL with back strain

Adam Lind GETTY IMAGES FILE

The Toronto Blue Jays placed first baseman/designated hitter Adam Lind on the 15-day disabled list Monday with a mid-back strain.

In 58 games overall, the Muncie, Ind., native is batting .227 with eight home runs and 27 RBIs.

The Jays have recalled first baseman David Cooper from Las Vegas for the second time this season.

In 24 games with Toronto this season, Cooper, 24, from Stockton, Calif., is batting .292 with two home runs and six RBIs.

In Las Vegas, Cooper is batting .314 with 10 home runs, 52 RBI and a team leading 27 doubles.

Tennis. Ontario's Raonic and Quebec's Wozniak dominate opening matches in London

It didn't take long for Canada's Milos Raonic to show his opponent what to expect in their first-round men's singles match at the London Games.

Raonic opened the match by firing an ace that hit the back fence in a heartbeat and left Tatsuma Ito completely flat-footed. The Japanese player never found an answer for the Canadian's booming serve, with Raonic posting a comfortable 6-3, 6-4 victory at the All England Club.

"I'm fortunate enough to play with a big enough game that most of my results are going to depend on me," Raonic said. "I feel like if I step it up, I will have an opportunity to win."

Raonic used ground strokes and mixed in some deft cut shots to prevent Ito from finding his rhythm. The Thornhill, Ont., native picked up an early break for a 3-1 lead and was never threatened the rest of the way.

"It was a perfect match to get into the tournament," said Canadian coach Martin Laurendeau. "He could work on his game and his patterns and make sure everything is nice and clean and he was able to do that convincingly."

Aleksandra Wozniak of Blainville, Que., also posted a straight-set victory in her opening women's singles match. She defeated Marina Erakovic of New Zealand 6-2, 6-1.

"It's my first Olympics and it's so different than any Grand Slam or any WTA tournament," Wozniak said. "Tennis is such an individual sport, but (here) it's like you play for your own country. So the first victory for sure, it's for Canada."

Competition rising

The draw gets a lot tougher now for the No. 25-ranked Raonic, with a second-round match against world No. 6 Jo-Wilfried Tsonga of France on tap for Tuesday.

- Wozniak also faces a huge challenge in Round 2 where she will meet Venus Williams.

Toronto's Daniel Nestor and Vancouver's Vasek Pospisil won their opening men's doubles match later Monday. They beat Horia Tecau and Adrian Ungur of Romania 6-3, 7-6 (9).

"I'm playing with one of the best doubles players in the world," Pospisil said. "We get fired up and we play some of our best tennis."

Donovan Bailey might be 16 years removed from Olympic glory, but that doesn't mean the former sprinter isn't paying attention to the next generation of Canadian athletes.

The double gold medallist at the Atlanta Olympics sent out a message on his Twitter feed Monday to Canada's competitors at the London Games.

"Don't let small minds convince you that your dreams are too big! Go Canada let's dominate!," tweeted Bailey, who set a then-world record time of 9.84 seconds in the men's 100-metre final in Atlanta.

Bailey, who was also part of Canada's gold-medal winning 4x100-metre men's team in 1996, added some encouraging words for tennis player Milos Raonic before his first-round match at the Games.

"Good luck to @milosraonic today in his first match at the Olympics!," Bailey wrote, before later congratulating the No. 25-ranked player in the world on his straight-sets win.

Defending silver medalist Park Tae-hwan of South Korea and 400 free champion Sun Yang of China shared silver in 1:44.93, while world champion Lochte finished fourth and world-record holder Paul Biedermann of Germany was fifth.

With so many standouts, and despite Phelps' decision not to enter, the event was dubbed the "Race of the Century."

"I had to look twice at the scoreboard to be sure it was the right time. I had a race plan in my head, but this is above my expectations and hopes," Agnel said. "I worked on keeping my speed and putting all my guts into the last 50. I don't know what to say — it worked."
